Jetstar expands access to low fares for trade partners and consumers in China

- Chinese travellers now with more access to Jetstar’s low fares
- Jetstar fares now fully accessible on all TravelSky GDS and LCC platforms
- Part of strengthening Jetstar’s routes in-and-out of China

Jetstar has continued the expansion of its distribution channels in China with new and convenient initiatives designed to give consumers and the travel trade easier access to Jetstar’s low fares.

Buying flights on Jetstar.com is easy for consumers with the recent addition of popular payment methods such as Alipay and China Union Pay credit cards.

Jetstar is now pleased to announce that fares are now available to customers via Ctrip, China’s largest online travel portal.

“Our presence on Ctrip, China’s leading travel portal with more than 50 million registered users, creates unprecedented access for our growing number of Chinese customers,” Jetstar Group Chief Commercial Officer David Koczkar said.

Also, with the addition of TravelSky’s Eterm GDS, customers can now access Jetstar’s fares and ancillary products via over 7,000 travel agents across China.

Travel agents in China now have the choice of booking Jetstar via the TravelSky GDS or a new a customised Jetstar trade site, including direct bank debit in RMB for all Jetstar Group airlines flying to China.

Mr Koczkar said this expansion reflected Jetstar’s plan to strengthen its presence in China.

“Working with our travel industry partners to ensure our low fares are easy to access for consumers is a key priority as we look to strengthen our presence on routes to-and-from China,” he said.

The Jetstar Group currently flies to nine Greater Chinese destinations.

Jetstar Airways flies to Beijing, while Jetstar Asia flies to Hangzhou, Ningbo, Shantou, Haikou, Guangzhou, Nanning*, Hong Kong and Taipei.

Jetstar Hong Kong is scheduled to start flying in 2013 (subject to regulatory approval) to destinations in Greater China.

*Jetstar Asia operates a twice weekly A320 service between Singapore and Nanning in China, in an arrangement with Air Sino Euro Associates Travel.
