Jetstar to add two additional weekly flights to Fiji from December 2018 to mid-January 2019

In its eight year of operations to the popular holiday destination, Jetstar has announced it will add two additional weekly services between Sydney and Nadi from 15 December 2018 to 19 January 2019, taking the total number of weekly flights to the island to six.

Operated by an Airbus A320 aircraft, the additional services add close to 2,000 number of seats to the route and reflects strong demand, particularly during the busy Australian school holiday peak.

Fares start from $249 one way and are available from today at jetstar.com

Jetstar Group's Executive Manager Networks, Alan McIntyre said:

"We've built flexibility into our fleet which allows us to respond to peaks in seasonal demand and we are excited to offer more flights to Fiji during this busy school holiday period.

"With direct flights from Sydney taking only four hours, Fiji has become a very attractive option for families looking for an overseas getaway and with more services between the two countries we are now able to provide customers with greater choice," he added.
